The publishers take pleasure in schnowledging the kind reception every where scoofed to their periodical by the people, and, generally, by the press. The first number was, from the nature of the case, hardly a fair index of the character and resources of the Magasine. The present number exhibit as greater variety of matter, and is in every way more vigorous, as well as more attractive. The future will exhibit still greater variety of matter, and is in every way more vigorous, as well as more attractive. The future will exhibit still greater variety of the most she discussion of topics of living interest, will be the constant aim of the conductors of THE ATLANTIC.
The publishers do not agree with the common estimate of the public tate—that it is necessary, at this day, to write now to the people—but they believe, on the other hand, that there are enough readers in this country to appreciate and pay for the best thoughts of the best writers of the times. Therefore, THE ATLANTIC, though high in its same, and though taking a position which cannot be shared by any existing American Magazine, is offered for sale as a popular price, and appeals to the good sense and good taste of the great as and the variety of the people of the moment of the proposed state of the great as and people and people cent a number, or $3 a year.

"Of the classic reputation of this poet, every year more and more convinces us. Notwithstanding the fluctuations of schools and opinions in poetry, the elements of Bryant's muse survive and grow, inj estimation from their eternal claim to love and honor. He is essentially an American poet; his subject is nature; his art pure, chaste and elevated.

"To every thoughtful heart and reverent eye, 'Thanatopsis,' the 'Waterfall,' the 'Hymn to Death,' the 'Past,' 'The Prairies,' the 'Future Life,' the 'Conquerou's Grave' and so many other memorable pieces inspired by meditation and the study of nature, are full of memorable significance, and are 'a joy for ever.' We rejoice to meet them once more printed on the neutral thresh and ample page of this exquisite quarto, and interspersed with such graceful illustrations by the first artists of the day. We hazard nothing in predicting that this national souvehir will take its place among the illerary and artistic treasures of every American who knows how to unit the highest pleasures of taste with the noblest intellectual recreation and patriotic sympathy."

And we shall be greatly mistaken if this is not the best new Juvenile of the season. Our Literary Critic who is second to none as a judge in such matters, gave the following report after reading the manuscrip:

One of the very best Juveniles I have ever read. It is unexceptionable in its moral. The story is lively, and very pleasexceptionable in its moral. The story is lively, and very pleasing, taking the reader in a voyage to Gibrattar. Genoa, Rome, Naples, Athens, Smyrna, Constantinople and Egypt, describing all the wonders of all these places in a capital manner. The book is decidedly able, popular, pleasing and useful."
